In this two part series, Pat Pickett, a licensed professional counselor was the guest. This program focused on the difficult challenge for woman to be career-oriented along with motherhood. Husbands must help with domestic responsibilities to make the process better for family life. Some women begin as homes makers or career people and then begin to combine the other in their life. The traditional lack of support from society and family has made the lifestyle very challenging for women. It seems to be a bigger challenge for female executives and medical careers.
